OBITUARY.

Louis Euker.

A cablegrain réceived in this city yes-terday from Marburg, Prussia, by Colonel Charles Euker, announced the death of his brother, Louis Euker, himself for many years a well known resident of Richmond, which occurred in that Prus-sian city yesterday. The death of Mr. Euker will recall him to many Richmond-ers, and especially to the older citizens, who know him well during his long resi-dence here.

ers, and especially to the older citizens, who knew him well during his long residence here.

Deceased was one of six brothers, the last surviving one of whom is Colonel Charles Enker, a well known Contederate veteran and esteemed citizen. The other brothers, all of whom have died, were William, Edward, Reinhardt and George Enker.

Louis Euker came to Richmond in the early fiftles, being then a young man. His first employment here was as bartender for the late Louis Rueger, the founder of Rueger's Hotel and restaurant. About the year 1859 he began business, for himself at the stand now kept by Mr. Gus Delarue and continued therountil the outbreak of the war between the States, when he returned to his old home in Prussia and there remained until peace again reigned. Returning to this city in the late sixties, he resumed, business at the corner of Seventh and Brood Streets, and there kept a bar and restaurant for many years—up to 1897, in fact, when he sold his business to John Weinbrunn, who conducted the place until about three years ago.

Mr. Euker, during his long business career, prospered and was thrifty, amassing considerable property, much of which was in real estate.

Mr. Euker was about seventy-two years

Ing considerable property, much of which was in real estate.

Mr. Euker was about seventy-two years of age, and was well educated and a man of wide and varied information.

A man of genial temperament, Mr. Euker was widely known and very generally esteemed. He was an old member and an enthusiastic supporter of the Gesangverein Virginia.
